BUSHMILLS VIRTUAL ASSISTANCE LAUNCHED

Cochrane area Personal Assistant, Gillian Slater, announces the launch of her company Bushmills Virtual Assistance. Bushmills Virtual Assistance is a home-based company providing virtual assistant services to clients worldwide through the internet.

By utilizing today's technologies, Gillian can provide immediate professional support with administration tasks that are usually handled by an in-house employee, communicating with her clients by telephone, email or fax. With her clients' permission, she can access their computer from her home computer. There has been a dramatic growth in Virtual Assistants over the past couple of years. They are the answer to anyone looking for administrative support but do not require on-site support.

Gillian, owner and founder of Bushmills Virtual Assistance emigrated to Canada over two years ago from Northern Ireland. After giving birth to her first child in 2007, her desire to put her years of Executive Assistance experience to good use were too strong to ignore. She needed to be at home for her family but she wasn't going to let the diaper portion of her brain overtake the assisting portion. After a lot of internet research and completing a Virtual Business Startup System, Bushmills Virtual Assistance was born (and the delivery was a lot easier than the first birth!).

One of the biggest advantages to clients in obtaining the services of a Virtual Assistant is that they have access to a professional Personal Assistant when they need it. No more having to pay different rates of pay for working different hours. A lot of Virtual Assistants are available 24 hours a day.
